Trends in development planning of Grozny in the 1960s

F. Daudova

It has been characterized the main directions in urban planning of Grozny in the 1960s. This period was characterized by rapid growth of cities on the basis of further development of industry, housing and public construction. An important place in the implementation of housing construction program was given to the introduction into the construction of precast concrete structures and the transition to industrial methods in construction. Great work conducted by the office of the Union of architects of Grozny, which, together with artists of the Republic took an active part in the design of individual highways, malls, squares, parks of the city and country, as well as the architecture of small forms.
