Synergy of the spiritual values of the Georgian and Russian peoples in the late XX - early XXI century. A new vision of cultural relation

E.E. Nesmeyanov

The features of the development of Caucasian studies in the Rostov scientific school, created by Corresponding Member of the Russian Academy of Sciences Yu.A. Zhdanov in the 1990s of XXth century are considered. The development and new approaches in the assessment of Georgian science and culture of the XXI century are shown. The significance of the Caucasian culture as the most important source of the culture of the Russian peoples is indicated. Georgian culture and science is determined by the school of Yu.A. Zhdanov as synergy and identity of spiritual values. The essence of the new approach in understanding the mutual penetration of cultures is in the transition to the idea of a single civilizational community of the peoples of the Caucasus and the defining significance of the Orthodox existential values of the peoples of Georgia and Russia in the XXIst century.

Keywords: spiritual values, Caucasian studies, culture, peoples of the Caucasus, Orthodoxy
