Human sexualities in XXI century: diagnosis and prognosis

E.O. Tishchenko, L. Zharov

The key moments of the evolution of human sexuality as a systemic diversity reflecting to a great extent the essence of the anthropological catastrophe of the present in this particular sphere of ontology and human being are considered. An attempt is made to diagnose the essence of the permanent sexual revolutions in connection with the threats and prospects of bodily and sexual modifications of man, his cyborgization in the aspect of posthuman existence and the corresponding personology. On this basis, some prognostic concepts are expressed that are relevant, especially to the fate of domestic sexual practices in the foreseeable future. Integrative approach to the consideration of the phenomenon of sexuality is determined by the complexity of the studied problems of communication and the behavior of the individual in a multicultural environment. The phenomenon of sexology is determined by the person's value orientations, the motives of his activity, his understanding of himself in the world and the world around him, his general culture, the ability to develop his creative potential.
