Sign and symbol systems as parts of semiotic systems in youth subcultures

Y.A. Petrova

All members of youth subcultures can be recognized as the members of appropriate semiotic system. The author considers the language as a sign-symbolic system, reflecting the youth subculture, in interpersonal communication. Considering the language of youth in a semiotic sense, we understand that any communication system that uses signs and symbols in a specially ordered manner, i.e. language is a form of communication between a "sending message" (addressee) and "receiving it" (narratee) [1, p. 21].
