U.S. cooperation with the Republic of Korea and the DPRK: resolutions and decisions of the U.S. Congress (2001-2004)

R. Ayriyan, A. Safarov

The materials of the US Congress during the 107th and 108th convocations devoted to the interaction of the United States of America with the countries of the Korean Peninsula are analyzed in the context of common historical themes, contradictions and partnerships on issues of arms, economic cooperation and competition, migration aspects and respect for human rights. The debates, resolutions, and bills in which critical and approving remarks are made about the decisions of President George W. Bush are analyzed. in the context of the American foreign policy strategy on the Korean Peninsula, as well as proposals and concrete actions aimed at stabilizing relations between the United States and the two Korean states in 2001-2004.
