Phraseological units with lacunar semantics (on the material of Russian and French)

S.V. Maksimets

Phraseological units with lacunar semantics are analyzed through the prism of their cultural identity on the material of Russian and French languages. The question of the life values of ethnic groups who are the native speakers of these languages is examined on the example of phraseological units representing different ideographical areas. The differences in life values of Russian and French linguocultural communities are ascertained as a result of the semantically lacunar units research.
