

UDC: 9

Historical transport metamorphosis: natural beginning and artificial continuation

V. Vereskun

Transport cannot be reduced to the status of a means of traffic. From the very beginning, it was an element of the movement mechanism and progressively ascended from physical movement through chemical and biological logic to socio-anthropological and technical, in order to return to its physical foundations in the future. Relying on domestic and foreign scientific and philosophical sources, we made an attempt to analyze the history of transport in an ideological context, to determine the systemic position of transport in the development of the material world; the origin of homo sapiens; social progress. We were guided by the desire to overcome the utilitarianism of technicalism in the interpretation of transport, to show to politicians, including those who develop the training system of professional cadres the actual place and horizons of transport progress. The metamorphosis of transport concretizes the understanding of the mechanism and direction of the development of the world.

Keywords: transport, metamorphosis, movement, space, time, mechanism of motion, development, personality, means, factor

References

1. Большая иллюстрированная энциклопедия: В 32 т. Т. 27. М.: АСТ: Астрель, 2010.
2. Britannica. Настольная иллюстрированная энциклопедия: В 2 т. Т. II. М.: Изд-во АСТ, 2009.
3. Дильс Г. Античная техника. М.; Л.: ОНТИ. Государственное технико-теоретическое издательство, 1934.
4. Крик Э. Введение в инженерное дело / Пер. с англ. М.: Энергия, 1970.
5. Сочинения Козьмы Пруткова. М.: Советская Россия, 1981.
6. Энгельс Ф. Роль труда в процессе превращения обезьяны в человека. Диалектика природы / Маркс К. и Энгельс Ф. Сочинения. Изд. 2. М.: Госполитиздат. 1961. Т. 20.
7. Ясперс К. Истоки истории и ее цель. Вторая часть. Настоящее и будущее. Смысл и назначение истории / Пер. с нем. М.: Политиздат, 1991.
8. Junger E. Der Arbeiter. Hamburg, 1932.
9. Junger E.G. Uber die Perfektion der Technik. Frankfurt a. M., 1944.