The effectiveness of state policy in relation to the development of regional economic systems

M.S. Dzhagaeva, D. Byasov

The problems of the development of regional economies do not go off the agenda of the work of state governing bodies in the Russian Federation. The effectiveness of managerial influence in modern conditions requires continuous monitoring, since not only the Russian, but also the entire world economic system faces challenges not only of an objective nature, but also problems caused by the subjective approach of some states to solving their own problems.
