The origins of antitrinitarian ideas in the historical and theological concept of Christian unitarism

M. Shlyakhov, N. Starikova

It is considered the formation of the scientific historiography of the Reformation, which became one of the most significant events of the world historical process that influenced the development of Western culture, philosophy, economics and other spheres of society. Attention is focused on a separate story of the Reformation – the history of the formation of antitrinitarian views in the interpretation of the followers of religious reform. It is studied the views of thinkers of the XVII – mid XX centuries, who tried to give a historical justification for the development of socianism. Their works on the history of Antitrinitarianism have not been translated into Russian. It is presented a historiographical description of the historical and theological views of the thinkers of this period.

Keywords: reformation, socianism, the origins of antitrinitarianism, historiography of antitrinitarian views, historiography of Christian unitarianism, historical and theological concepts, historical concepts of antitrinitarianism
